

In mid 2009 we (arts organisation Proboscis) travelled around Hertfordshire meeting over 280 people from Watford, Stevenage, North Hertfordshire and Broxbourne. We set out on an autumn day to drive up through Cheshunt, Broxbourne and Hoddesdon, over to Ware and Stevenage then Letchworth, up to Ashwell, down to Pilton, Hitchin across to Watford and back to London. It was a journey through old and new; market towns, new towns, agricultural land and urban centres. In the weeks that followed we put our ears to the ground and got to know Hertfordshire and its communities through the stories of its people. We researched urban centres, towns and villages and travelled through the county in cars, trains, by cycle and on foot, on narrow lanes and motorways.

We talked to people in groups, individually, inside, outside, in pubs, cafes, community centres, libraries, at home and at work. We gathered their opinions and experiences of their communities, what it's like living in their neighbourhoods and what gives them a sense of belonging. These experiences, whilst locally specific, are relevant to Hertfordshire as a whole. We met people between the ages of 5 and 94, from many cultures and backgrounds, from small organisations, schools, community groups, urban centres and rural villages. We captured their views through informal conversations on the street, hosting a stall at the local market and visiting community groups. We ran a creative workshop with a youth group and collected stories through other activities and events. From this research emerged the six themes of Transport, Movement, Listening, Community, Getting involved and publications.

In all this we've taken Proboscis' anarchaeology approach, to informally and creatively excavate layers of meaning and understanding to get beneath the surface of some of Hertfordshire's communities.

Our enduring experience of this journey has been of the generosity of the people, the ambition of their ideas and the determination and commitment they devote to building their communities.

This book is one of 6 that are based on the limited edition publication printed to accompany the project. It draws together the multiple layers of ideas and experiences we found across different communities and it is designed to reflect those ideas and voices.

With Our Ears to the Ground is a project by arts organisation Proboscis. It was commissioned by Green Heart Partnership with Hertfordshire County Council. It builds upon previous consultations, by Hertfordshire County Council, that used traditional surveys to find out how well people from different backgrounds get on with each other. This publication and the project research will be presented to the community, Council Members and Project Team to inform the Hertfordshire Forward Community Cohesion Strategy, equalities planning across the county, and to support the partners to build stronger communities where people feel valued, get along well together and feel they belong.

Most jobs now, you've got to be over 18, you've got to have experience, you've got to have a top CV, no criminal record. I'm kinda screwed on that one, that's why I ain't got a job. If you lie about your criminal record you get found out.

For ever old people have been scared of young people, you know its not so intimidating. But usually if you know of kids hanging around you might be intimidated. But usually if you know them, if you know their parents, you know aren't you? If you see groups of kids hanging around you might be intimidated. But usually if you know them, if you know their parents, you know its not so intimidating.

Perceptions

I'm a teenager myself, I don't really want to be associated with old people cause they see teenagers as threatening. So I was just thinking like, if you were to get teenagers and old people together to show that not all of us are as bad as people make out in the news. I think it's really bad that teenagers get knocked down for wearing hoodies and hanging around the shops. There's not really much more we can do, there's no jobs out there so we just think, "sod it" and hang around the shops.

I'm nineteen. It's not as if I'm walking home in my school uniform pushing my son. Yet they obviously assume, "teenage mum, got to come from rough background". They don't want to take the time to get to know us.
