Though this space is also within the heart of the environmental studies building, it is more open than the coffee shop, and thus easier to go unnoticed.

An Engineering tradition, P.O.E.T.S. is a lounge Monday through Wednesday, but on Thursday and Friday, from noon until four, it becomes the only on-campus faculty pub.

Inside there are two stories of lounging area, including a bar just inside the door. During the day, you must quickly enter the space to avoid interrupting a serious movie session. Apparently, these movies are an essential part of an Engineer’s education. We’d like to think that there are a prime opportunity for Fine Arts squatting. You can email your request to engsoc.uwaterloo.ca. And just in case you needed any more reasons to avoid studying, they also have music, TV, darts, popcorn and tons of other fun paraphernalia. As well, there are opportunities to debut your band at one of the Pub Afternoons.

Outside P.O.E.T.S. is the Engineering C&D, which provides the two most essential ingredients in the engineer’s survival diet: coffee and donuts. The fare is cheap and extensive.

The original farm house of south campus, the Grad house is meant for the exclusive use of graduate students and staff. Membership is $20.00 a term, but on Tuesdays, non members can enjoy the atmosphere. The space boasts a bar with a variety of beers on tap, live music and great food, made to order.

Designed for psychology students, the PAS lounge could leave you feeling like a lab-rat trapped in a maze. If you get an overeager psychology student chasing you with a bell, asking if you are salivating, run like the wind.
