

running the next generation into debt, we ought to do the work of it, otherwise we use them meanly and pitifully. In order to discover the line of our duty rightly, we should take our children in our hand, and fix our station a few years farther into life; that eminence will present a prospect, which a few present fears and prejudices conceal from our sight.

Though I would carefully avoid giving unnecessary offense, yet I am inclined to believe, that all those who espouse the doctrine of reconciliation, may be included within the following descriptions. Interested men, who are not to be trusted; weak men, who CANNOT see; prejudiced men, who WILL NOT see; and a certain set of moderate men, who think better of the European world than it deserves; and this last class, by an ill-judged deliberation, will be the cause of more calamities to this continent, than all the other three.

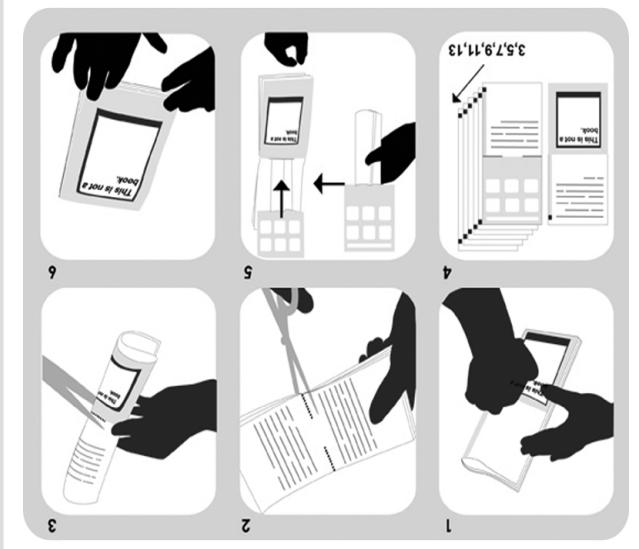

It is the good fortune of many to live distant from the scene of sorrow; the evil is not sufficient brought to their doors to make THEM feel the precariousness with which all American property is possessed. But let our imaginations transport us for a few moments to Boston, that seat of any thing which we may bequeath to posterity: GOVERNMENT is not sufficiently lasting to ensure parents, we have no joy, knowing that THIS "the present constitution" is merely temporary. As painful and positive conviction, that he calls no true pleasure by looking forward under the must have an end: And a serious mind can draw is a form of government, which sooner or later The authority of Great Britain over this continent, nor safety. years, when home should afford neither friendship open a sanctuary to the Persecuted in future America, as if the Almighty graciously meant to reformation was preceded by the discovery of which it was peopled increases the force of it. The adds weight to the argument, and the manner in likewise at which the continent was discovered, other, was never the design of Heaven. The time proof, that the authority of the one, over the England and America, is a strong and natural voice of nature cries, TIS TIME TO PART. Even separation. The blood of the slain, the weeping case, would be a safer convoy than a man of war.

Common Sense - Thoughts on the Present State of American Affairs (Part 1)

Thomas Paine

only of a temporary kind, repelled "THEY WILL commons, on the score, that his measures were that on his being attacked in the house of tho, an able minister was not without his faults) It hath been reported of the late Mr. Peham (who and the continent hath accepted the challenge. content; the appeal was the choice of the King, is closed. Arms, as the last resource, decide this all have been ineffectual, and the period of debate different motives, and with various designs; but ranks have embarraked in the controversy, from struggle between England and America. Men of all volumes have been written on the subject of the day. generously enlarge his views beyond the present themselves; that he will put ON, or rather that he reason and his feelings to determine for prejudice and prepossession, and suffer his with the reader, than that he will divest himself of sense; and have no other Preliminaries to settle simple facts, plain arguments, and common In the following pages I offer nothing more than available to download, print out and share.

DIFFUSION books are designed to be freely www.diffusion.org.uk

created on: Mon Apr 14 14:38:38 2008
Thomas Paine
Common Sense - Thoughts on the Present State o

LAST MY TIME." Should a thought so fatal and unmanly possess the colonies in the present contest, the name of ancestors will be remembered by future generations with detestation.

The sun never shined on a cause of greater worth. 'Tis not the affair of a city, a county, a province, or a kingdom, but of a continent - of at least one eighth part of the habitable globe. 'Tis not the concern of a day, a year, or an age; posterity are virtually involved in the contest, and will be more or less affected, even to the end of time, by the proceedings now. Now is the seed-time of continental union, faith and honour. The least fracture now will be like a name engraved with the point of a pin on the tender rind of a young oak; the wound will enlarge with the tree, and posterity read it in full grown characters.

By referring the matter from argument to arms, a new aera for politics is struck; a new method of thinking hath arisen. All plans, proposals, etc. prior to the nineteenth of April, i.e. to the commencement of hostilities, are like the almanacs of the last year; which, though proper then are superseded and useless now. Whatever more fallacious than this kind of argument. We always have the same effect. Nothing can be necessary towards her future happiness, and will Great Britain that the same connection with hath flourished under her former connection with have heard it asserted by some, that as America expect, if dependent.

to trust to, if separated, and what we are to nature and common sense, to see what we have connection and dependence, on the principles of dependent on Great Britain: To examine that always will sustain, by being connected with, and material injuries which these colonies sustain, and the argument, and inquire into some of the many hath passed away and left us as we were, it is but recognition which, like an agreeable dream, As much hath been said of the advantages of withdrawn her influence.

that the first hath failed, and the second hath the other friendship; but it hath so far happened method of effecting it; the one proposing force, only difference between the parties was the same point, viz. a union with Great-Britain: the same question then, terminated in one and the the question advanced in either side of was advanced by the advocates on either side of may as well assert that because a child has thrived upon milk that it is never to have meat, or that the first twenty years of our lives is to become a precedent for the next twenty. But even this is admitting more than is true, for I answer roundly, that America would have flourished as much, and probably much more, had no European power had any thing to do with her. The commerce, by which she hath enriched herself, are the necessaries of life, and will always have a market while eating is the custom of Europe.

But she has protected us, say some. That she has engrossed us is true, and defended the continent at our expense as well as her own is admitted, and she would have defended Turkey from the same motive, viz. the sake of trade and dominion.

Alas, we have been long led away by ancient prejudices, and made large sacrifices to superstition. We have boasted the protection of Great Britain, without considering, that her motive was INTEREST not ATTACHMENT; that she did not protect us from OUR ENEMIES on OUR ACCOUNT, but from HER ENEMIES on HER OWN ACCOUNT, from those who had no quarrel with us on any OTHER ACCOUNT, and who will always be earth. have rendered this continent the glory of the time, when, a little more, a little farther, would afford no lasting felicity, - that it is leaving the thing short of THAT is mere patchwork, that it can interest of this continent to be so; that every conscientious persuaded that it is the true and independent; I am clearly, positively, and resolutely to espouse the doctrine of separation from independence; I am not induced by motives of pride, party, or systems; England to Europe, America to itself. of nature, it is evident they belong to different respect to each other, reverses the common order primary planet, and as England and America, with hath nature made the satellite larger than its perpetually governed by an island. In no instance very absurd, in supposing a continent to be to take under their care; but there is something themselves, are the proper objects for kingdoms small islands not capable of protecting papistical design of gaining an unfair bias on the adopted by the king and his parasites, with a low or MOTHER COUNTRY hath been jesuitically true, or only party so and the phrase PARENT turns to her reproach; but it happens not to do not devour their young, nor savages make war upon their families; whereas the assertion, if But Britain is the parent country, say some. Then being the subjects of GREAT BRITAIN, will be our enemies as AMERICANS, but as our France and Spain never were, nor perhaps ever true way of proving enemyship, if I may so call it, proving relationship, but it is the nearest and only this is certainly a very round-about way of Pennsylvania and the Jerseys, and so on for the through the parent country, i.e. that colonies have no relation to each other but It has lately been asserted in parliament, that the last war ought to warn us against connections. They at war with Britain. The miseries of Hanover should be at peace with France and Spain were continent throw off the dependence, and we wave her pretensions to the continent, or the our enemies on the SAME ACCOUNT. Let Britain nothing hath contributed more than that very measure to make the Kings of Europe absolute: Witness Denmark and Sweden. Wherefore, since nothing but blows will do, for God's sake, let us come to a final separation, and not leave the next generation to be cutting throats, under the violated unmeaning names of parent and child.

To say, they will never attempt it again is idle and visionary, we thought so at the repeal of the stamp-act, yet a year or two undeceived us; as well may we suppose that nations, which have been once defeated, will never renew the quarrel.

As to government matters, it is not in the power of Britain to do this continent justice: The business of it will soon be too weighty, and intricate, to be managed with any tolerable degree of convenience, by a power so distant from us, and so very ignorant of us; for if they cannot conquer us, they cannot govern us. To be always running three or four thousand miles with a tale or a petition, waiting four or five months for an answer, which when obtained requires five or six more to explain it in, will in a few years be looked upon as folly and childishness - There was a time when it was proper, and there is a proper time for it to cease.

credulous weakness of our minds. Europe, and not England, is the parent country of America. This new world hath been the asylum for the persecuted lovers of civil and religious liberty from EVERY PART of Europe. Hither have they fled, not from the tender embraces of the mother, but from the cruelty of the monster; and it is so far true of England, that the same tyranny which drove the first emigrants from home, pursues their descendants still.

In this extensive quarter of the globe, we forget the narrow limits of three hundred and sixty miles (the extent of England) and carry our friendship on a larger scale; we claim brotherhood with every European Christian, and triumph in the generosity of the sentiment.

It is pleasant to observe by what regular gradations we surmount the force of local prejudice, as we enlarge our acquaintance with the world. A man born in any town in England divided into parishes, will naturally associate most with his fellow-parishioners (because their interests in many cases will be common) and distinguish him by the name of NEIGHBOUR; if he meet him but a few miles from home, he drops the narrow idea of a street, and salutes him by the name of TOWNSMAN; if he travel out of the country, and meet him in any other, he forgets the minor divisions of street and town, and calls him COUNTRYMAN, i.e. COUNTRYMAN; but if in their foreign excursions they should associate in France or any other part of EUROPE, their local remembrance would be enlarged into that of all Europeans meeting in America, or any other quarter of the globe, are COUNTRYMEN; for England, Holland, Germany, or Sweden, when compared with the whole, stand in the same phrase of parent or mother country applied to one third of the inhabitants, even of this province, distinctions too limited for continental minds. Not places on the larger scale, which the divisions of England only, as being false, selfish, narrow and ungenuous. But admitting, that we were all of English descent, what does it amount to? Nothing.

King of England, of the present line (William the third) is our duty, is truly farcical. The first reconciilation is our name and title: And to say that every other name and title is nothing.

But admitting, that we were all of English descent, being now an open enemy, extinguishes every desire to be who, or what, or where he will, that may be the means of sacrificing a whole continent will partake of the misfortune; rigidly employed, but if lost or neglected, the timidity of Britain does not think so. The most singular subject to any external power. The most sanguine in Britain does not thin so. The most strenuous of things, to all examples from former ages, to suppose, that this continent can longer remain in repugnant to reason, to the universal order of nature, and Art can not supply her place. Now a fallacious dream. Reconciilation is continental even a year's security, which can promise the plan short of separation, at this time, compasses a human wisdom cannot. The most stretch of imagination flattens vanity, or confirms obstinacy in disdaining. Our players have been rejected with ineffectual. Every quiet method for peace hath been have preferred so deep."

reconcilement grow, where wounds of deadly hate For, as Milton wisely expresses, "never can true the connection, and Art hath deserted

It is repugnant to reason, to the universal order season so precious and useful.

if she do not conquer herself by DELAY and being formed only on the plan of present convenience, will in a little time fall into a relapse more wretched than the first. But if you say, you can still pass the violations over, then I ask, Hath your house been burnt? Hath your property been destroyed before your face! Are your wife and children destitute of a bed to lie on, or bread to live on? Have you lost a parent or a child by their hands, and yourself the ruined and wretched survivor! If you have not, then are you not a judge of those who have. But if you have, and still can shake hands with the murderers, then are you unworthy of the name of husband, father, friend, or lover, and whatever may be your rank or title in life, you have the heart of a coward, and the spirit of a sycophant.

This is not inflaming or exaggerating matters, but trying them by those feelings and affections which nature justifies, and without which, we should be incapable of discharging the social duties of life, or enjoying the felicities of it. I mean not to exhibit horror for the purpose of provoking revenge, but to awaken us from fatal and unmanly slumbers, that we may pursue determinately some fixed object. It is not in the power of Britain or of Europe to conquer America, Conqueror) was a Frenchman, and half the Peers of England are descendants from the same country; therefore, by the same method of reasoning, England ought to be governed by France.

Much hath been said of the united strength of Britain and the colonies, that in conjunction they might bid defiance to the world. But this is mere presumption; the fate of war is uncertain, neither do the expressions mean any thing; for this continent would never suffer itself to be drained of inhabitants, to support the British arms in either Asia, Africa, or Europe.

Besides what have we to do with setting the world at defiance? Our plan is commerce, and that, well attended to, will secure us the peace and friendship of all Europe; because, it is the interest of all Europe to have America a FREE PORT. Her trade will always be a protection, and her barrenness of gold and silver secure her from invaders.

I challenge the warmest advocate for reconciliation, to shew, a single advantage that this continent can reap, by being connected with Great Britain. I repeat the challenge, not a single advantage is derived. Our corn will fetch its price love nor honor will be forced and unnatural, and connection with Britain, whom you can neither bring upon you only deceiving yourselves, and by your delay your land? If you cannot do all these, then are the power that hath carried fire and sword into You can hereafter love, honor, and faithfully serve touchstone of nature, and then tell me, whether Men of passage look somewhat lightly Bring the doctrine of reconciliation to the over the offences of Britain, and still hoping for the best, are apt to call out, "COME, COME, WE SHALL BE FRIENDS AGAIN, FOR ALL THIS." But Men of both armies.

the fury of both armies.

attack for their relief, they would be exposed to without the hope of redemption, and in a general it. In their present condition they are prisoners city, and plundered by the soldiery if they leave the fire of their friends if they continue within the stay and starve, or turn and beg. Endangered by affluence, have now, no other alternative than to city, who but a few months ago were in ease and have no trust. The inhabitants of that unfortunate us for ever to renounce a power in whom we can wretchedness will teach us wisdom, and instruct for separation then, because, neutrality in that advocates for reconciliation now, will be wishing not turn out like the last, and should it not, the CONNEXION WITH ENGLAND. The next war may trade of America goes to ruin, BECAUSE OF HER between England and any foreign power, the long at peace, and whenever a war breaks out Europe is too thickly planted with kinddoms to be make-weight in the scale of British politics.

dependence on Britain, she is made the contentions, which she never can do, while by her interest of America to steer clear of European connection with any part of it. It is the true market for trade, we ought to form no partial neither anger nor complaint. As Europe is our our friendship, and against whom, we have variance with nations, who would otherwise seek European wars and quarrels; and sets us at tends directly to involve this continent in submission to, or dependence on Great Britain, instruct us to renounce the alliance: Because, any duty to mankind at large, as well as to ourselves, that connection, are without number; and our But the injuries and disadvantages we sustain by must be paid for, buy them where we will.

in any market in Europe, and our imported goods