

come out. It would be rather jolly if you could lure him into a hammock in the orchard, just near the spot where there is a wasps' nest every summer. A comfortable hammock on a warm afternoon would appeal to his indolent tastes, and then, when he was getting drowsy, a lighted fusee thrown into the nest would bring the wasps out in an indignant mass, and they would soon find a 'home away from home' on Waldo's fat body. It takes some doing to get out of a hammock in a hurry."

"They might sting him to death," protested Mrs. Thackenbury.

"Waldo is one of those people who would be enormously improved by death," said Clovis; "but if you didn't want to go as far as that, you could have some wet straw ready to hand, and set it alight under the hammock at the same time that the fusee was thrown into the nest; the smoke would keep all but the most militant of the wasps just outside the stinging line, and as long as Waldo remained within its protection he would escape serious damage, and could be eventually restored to his mother, kippered all over and swollen in places, but still perfectly recognisable."

The Feast of Nemesis

Saki (H H Munro)

"It's a good thing that Saint Valentine's Day has dropped out of vogue," said Mrs. Thackenbury; "what with Christmas and New Year and Easter, eleven hot-houses and about thirty gardeners, so it would have been ridiculous to send flowers to Gertrude and Millie just when I thought I'd got the whole question nicely off my mind completely ruined my Christmases, and then the awful monotony of the letters of thanks: 'Thank you so much for your lovely flowers. It was so good of you to think of me.' Of course in the majority of cases I hadn't thought about the recipients at all; their names were down in my list of people who must not be left out. If I trusted to remembrance them there would be some awful sins of omission."

"The trouble is," said Clovis to his aunt, "all these days of intrusive remembrance harp so persistently on one aspect of human nature and they had quite abandoned hope of the lunch wines, and in the long interval of waiting, before being heated in a chafing-dish. Agnes Blaik would turn up, you could induce them to play silly games, such as that idiotic one of the Lord Mayor's dinner-party, in which every one has to choose the name of a dish and do something futile when it is called out. In this case they would probably burst into tears when their dish is mentioned. It would be a heavenly picnic."

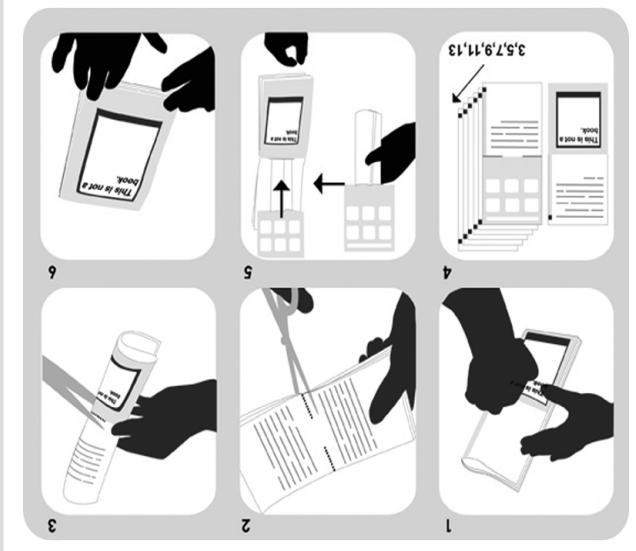

Mrs. Thackenbury was silent for a moment, she was probably making a mental list of the people she probably knew like a general observation that one could do to him? Evidently she was beginning himself -- have you thought of anything young man, Waldo Plubley, who is always picnicking. Presently she asked: "And that odious she would like to invite to the Duke Humphrey was probably making a mental list of the people that demand that you would have to bespeak him of the festival," said Clovis, "Waldo would be in weeks beforehand, and even then, if there were such a demand that you would have to bespeak him of the festival," said Clovis, "Waldo would be in an east wind blowing or a cloud or two in the sky he might be too careful of his precious self to beg him to see the possibilities of Nemesis Day. Begging himself -- have you thought of anything that one could do to him? Evidently she was coddling himself -- have you thought of anything that one could do to him? Evidently she was

"The trouble is," said Clovis to his aunt, "all these days of intrusive remembrance harp so persistently on one aspect of human nature and they had quite abandoned hope of the lunch wines, and in the long interval of waiting, before being heated in a chafing-dish. Agnes Blaik would turn up, you could induce them to play silly games, such as that idiotic one of the Lord Mayor's dinner-party, in which every one has to choose the name of a dish and do something futile when it is called out. In this case they would probably burst into tears when their dish is mentioned. It would be a heavenly picnic."

"The trouble is," said Clovis to his aunt, "all these days of intrusive remembrance harp so persistently on one aspect of human nature and they had quite abandoned hope of the lunch wines, and in the long interval of waiting, before being heated in a chafing-dish. Agnes Blaik would turn up, you could induce them to play silly games, such as that idiotic one of the Lord Mayor's dinner-party, in which every one has to choose the name of a dish and do something futile when it is called out. In this case they would probably burst into tears when their dish is mentioned. It would be a heavenly picnic."

"The trouble is," said Clovis to his aunt, "all these days of intrusive remembrance harp so persistently on one aspect of human nature and they had quite abandoned hope of the lunch wines, and in the long interval of waiting, before being heated in a chafing-dish. Agnes Blaik would turn up, you could induce them to play silly games, such as that idiotic one of the Lord Mayor's dinner-party, in which every one has to choose the name of a dish and do something futile when it is called out. In this case they would probably burst into tears when their dish is mentioned. It would be a heavenly picnic."

"The trouble is," said Clovis to his aunt, "all these days of intrusive remembrance harp so persistently on one aspect of human nature and they had quite abandoned hope of the lunch wines, and in the long interval of waiting, before being heated in a chafing-dish. Agnes Blaik would turn up, you could induce them to play silly games, such as that idiotic one of the Lord Mayor's dinner-party, in which every one has to choose the name of a dish and do something futile when it is called out. In this case they would probably burst into tears when their dish is mentioned. It would be a heavenly picnic."

available to download, print out and share.
DIFFUSION books are designed to be freely
www.diffusion.org.uk

created on: Wed Mar 5 15:54:27 2008
Saki (H H Munro)
The Feast of Nemesis

entirely ignore the other; that is why they become so perfunctory and artificial. At Christmas and New Year you are emboldened and encouraged by convention to send gushing messages of optimistic goodwill and servile affection to people whom you would scarcely ask to lunch unless some one else had failed you at the last moment; if you are supping at a restaurant on New Year's Eve you are permitted and expected to join hands and sing 'For Auld Lang Syne' with strangers whom you have never seen before and never want to see again. But no licence is allowed in the opposite direction."

"Opposite direction; what opposite direction?" queried Mrs. Thackenbury.

"There is no outlet for demonstrating your feelings towards people whom you simply loathe. That is really the crying need of our modern civilisation. Just think how jolly it would be if a recognised day were set apart for the paying off of old scores and grudges, a day when one could lay oneself out to be gracefully vindictive to a carefully treasured list of 'people who must not be let off.' I remember when I was at a private school we had one day, the last Monday of the term I think it was, consecrated to the settlement "Of course the thing would have to be done yourself; I must show the Webleys some you sent them. Well, transplant that idea to the you remembred to thank you for the calendar has male Webley asks the female Webley if she the male Webley for six days after Christmass calendar, and daily Bertrle at Bouremouth, and you send them a attention at Christmass, they were kind to dear Bertrle at Bouremouth," said Clovis; "the charm of futrively and politely," said Clovis; "the charm of

"I should call it reconstructing the punishment," within strictlly decorative limits."

"What the French call reconstructing the crime." always permitted on that day to recall the episode that purpose. Still, if one had chastised a smaller boy for being cheeky weeks before, one was said Mrs. Thackenbury; "and, anyhow, I don't see schoolboy vengeance into civilised adult life. We haven't outrrown our passions, but we are the other thing. Now, for instance, you say to it would be that it would never be perfunctory like

"I suppose to have learned how to keep them how you could introduce a system of primitive schoolboy vengeance into civilised adult life. We within strictlly decorative limits."

"That is to his memory by chastising him again. That is what the French call reconstructing the crime."

"I suppose to have learned how to keep them how you could introduce a system of primitive schoolboy vengeance into civilised adult life. We always permitted on that day to recall the episode that purpose. Still, if one had chastised a smaller boy for being cheeky weeks before, one was after all, any day of the term could be used for appreciate it as much as it deserved, because, of friends and grudges; of course we did not other and more human side of your nature, and say to yourself: 'Next Thursday is Nemesis Day; what on earth can I do to those odious people next door who made such an absurd fuss when Ping Yang bit their youngest child?' Then you'd get up awfully early on the allotted day and climb over into their garden and dig for truffles on their tennis court with a good gardening fork, choosing, of course, that part of the court that was screened from observation by the laurel bushes. You wouldn't find any truffles but you would find a great peace, such as no amount of present-giving could ever bestow."

"I shouldn't," said Mrs. Thackenbury, though her air of protest sounded a bit forced; "I should feel rather a worm for doing such a thing."

"You exaggerate the power of upheaval which a worm would be able to bring into play in the limited time available," said Clovis; "if you put in a strenuous ten minutes with a really useful fork, the result ought to suggest the operations of an unusually masterful mole or a badger in a hurry."

"They might guess I had done it," said Mrs. Thackenbury.

Text from Project Gutenberg: www.gutenberg.net

CCX074@coventry.ac.uk

Head edition by David Price,

Transcribed from the 1914 John Lane, The Bodley Christmases," said Clovis.

"That would be one greeting less to exchange at

Mrs. Thackenbury.

"His mother would be my enemy for life," said

missing bandage -- the lobster Newburg and the occasion by mentioning in detail the items of the would have had an early and comfortable lunch before you started, and you could improve the "For them, but not for you," said Clovis; "you Thackenbury.

"It would be a ghastly picnic," said Mrs.

"It would be a ghastly picnic," said Mrs.

"Then have all the other guests, people whom you fact, I don't believe it could be done."

"It would require no ordinary human strategy to every morsel of food could have been eaten up."

"Some wild woodland spot and lose her again

lunch was served; when you found her again would be quite simple to ask her to a picnic in instance, who thinks of nothing but her food, it dislike. That greedily little Agnes Blak, for cards you've sent them. The thing would be much like people at Christmas to know what presents or be half the satisfaction of the thing, just as you