How do we put the experience of parents and children at the heart of how we construct services?

How do we gain a real understanding of the needs of parents and children?

How can we engage more with parents & get them involved in early intervention support work?

How can we strengthen collaboration between the public sector and third sector to create better and more innovative services?

How do we create innovative & effective services that parents and children need and want?

Question Cube

Co-production means delivering public services in an equal and reciprocal relationship between professionals, people using services, their families and their neighbours. Where activities are co-produced in this way, both services and neighbourhoods become far more effective agents of change

We want to gather your thoughts and ideas on children's services and Early Intervention.

Please write or draw in this cube and give it back to the Early Intervention team.

Please write or doodle as much or as little as you feel necessary, let us know what strikes you, what stories you have heard or what you feel is important.

Total Place is a new initiative that looks at how a whole area approach to public services can lead to better services at less cost.

It seeks to identify and avoid overlap and duplication between organisations. Birmingham is one of 13 pilot areas.

These pilots have an opportunity to be innovative & redesign the way public services are planned and delivered.

The Early Intervention theme is exploring the benefits to children, parents and practitioners of several initiatives and new ways of working process that shift services towards prevention and early intervention.
